

Let Yourself Dream
(Tobin Mueller)

What will you do if you can't find it?
What if the world is not the kind you can bear?
Would you share a place of solitude
Where nothing need be true,
Just you and me
And all the dreams that we might conjure and carry?

Let yourself dream what you choose
Without fear of losing.
All the world has fled, so go ahead and dream.

There's a knowledge inside you...
That there is something more to each life that's lived,
Each life imagined.

Let yourself fall through the stars,
Once so far away and hard,
To a future of hope and wonder
In which a simple girl survives only to arise a hero...
Another storied shining light: A hero.

Let yourself dream what you choose
Without fear of losing
All this love that binds, just go and find your dream.
Just go and find your dream.
You will surely find your dream.

There's a vision inside you,
That you are something more than what people see:
Something holy.

And if you let yourself walk in this dream,
Let me walk with you.
We will find a way to make the dream come true.
We will find a way to make the dream come true.
We will find a way.

©2004/2019 Tobin Mueller
From "Runners In A Dream" by Tobin Mueller & Randy Appel